

INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL OF YOUNG LEGAL SCHOLARS

Academic Workshop

February 1978, in Minsk, on the initiative of the Central Committee of the All-Union Leninist Young Communist League, the first All-Union School of Young Legal Scholars was held on the topic: "Methodological problems of Soviet legal science at the present stage".

More than 150 young scientists, teachers and post-graduate students from law schools and institutes of academies of science of all Union republics, scientific and educational centers of the country, research institutes of all-Union and republican ministries and departments took part in the School's work. The main formats of the School's work were plenary sessions, sections, round tables and creative meetings. Twenty reports on theoretical problems of the state and law, the methodology of legal science, and topical issues of international law were heard.

T.Ya. Khabrieva, Yu.A. Tikhomirov, V.E. Chirkin and other prominent scholars who had the opportunity to participate in the work of schools for young scientists and lawyers in those years, became the ideological inspirers of the renaissance and renewed annual Schools-workshops for young scientists-lawyers.

In May 2006, the ILCL held the May School of Young Legal Scholars, reviving the tradition of scientific communication of young scholars and legal experts and reaffirming their commitment to the development of international scientific cooperation and research of young talented lawyers from Russia and abroad.

The topic of the Schools conducted by the Institute are devoted to the studies of current theoretical and practical problems of lawmaking and law enforcement, such as: "Law: stability and dynamics" (2006), "The influence of international law on national legislation" (2007), "Efficiency of legislation and modern legal technologies" (2008), "Legal problems of scientific progress" (2009), "Legacy of legal science and modernity" (2010).

On May 26 - 28, 2011, with the support of the Presidential Administration of the Russian Federation, the VI International School of Young Legal Scholars on the topic "The State in a Changing World" was held.

Based on the results of the conference, we can state that the topic «the state» has regained popularity. The gap between the study of law and the state, which has been observed in the domestic legal literature for at least the last 20-25 years, has been overcome. State-research topics should receive intensive development not so much in the descriptions of the structural components of the state, but as in its functional impacts. Moreover, a broad vector of studying the state is needed at the national level and within the framework of international cooperation.

In 2012, taking into account the Institute's immersion in the problems of lawmaking and law enforcement in the field of combating corruption, the VII International School of Young Legal Scholars and Legal Professionals "Legal Innovations in Combating Corruption" was held in the framework of the first Eurasian Anti-Corruption Forum, which took place on 30-31 May in Moscow within the walls of the Accounts Chamber of the Russian Federation.

Participants in the VII International Academic Workshop discussed topical issues related to overcoming corruption, providing state and municipal services, creating a favorable legal environment for business activities, improving the quality of public administration in general.

In 2013, the Institute held the VIII International School of Young Legal Scholars "Law and Ecology" with the support of the Ministry of Natural Resources and Ecology of the Russian Federation. A red thread in all the discussions within the School was the idea that environmentally oriented development is the only possible condition for the preservation of mankind. Environmental problems were recognized as one of the main challenges to sustainable development, and the lack of efforts by the world community to address these problems was noted. The regulatory and protective role of law in the environment was particularly indicated.

The IX International School of Young Legal Scholars "Law and Social Development: A New Humanistic Hierarchy of Values" focused on a comprehensive scientific research and discussion of main legal problems of social development, including issues of public control, health, education, science, culture and sport , the social responsibility of business and the duties of the social state.

In 2015 the topic of the School was «Lawmaking and legal science: contemporary problems», in 2016 “Effective law enforcement: Doctrine and Practice” and in 2017 the XIII International School of Young Legal Scholars was devoted to “Composition of the legal space: update dynamics”.

Main speakers and heads of sectional sessions are leading Russian and foreign scientists, representatives of higher state bodies. As in the 70's and 80's. XX century the Academic Workshop provides great opportunities for young researchers to communicate with leading scientists in this field of knowledge, contributes to the development of creative searches, the formation of the individual personality of the young scientist, focuses on the study of acute and urgent problems in the legal field.
